

SOLIA LESU CHARITY GOLF DAY

HOSTED BY MARRIOTT INTERNATIONAL
#givebackfiji

The Solia Lesu initiative has served various people in the villages impacted by the economic downturn and the majority of the proceeds from this event will help sustain this program for longer.

Foundation gives back to the community

By MONIKA SINGH

MARRIOTT foundation's Solia Lesu initiative recently made their sixth meal delivery to a home care centre in Lautoka.

The Loloma Home & Care Centre received packs of cooked meals, bread, milk and linen consisting of bedsheets, bath towels, pillow cases and hand towels from the foundation for which the residents at the Loloma home were appreciative and thankful towards the gesture.

"The support for the foundation has been overwhelming with our associates opting to be involved in one way or another including our business partners that have shown interest," said Farrah Shazleen, cluster director of human resources, Marriott International Fiji Resorts.

"The drive has only been successful with teamwork and it is rewarding to see the smiles it brings onto people's faces. Their emotions are just priceless and continues to empower you to do more.

"During these stressful times, looking at the appreciative faces gives us certain level of hope and contentment. At Marriott International, one of our core objectives is not only to take care of our associates and guests but also the communities we live in," she said.

She said the project continued to strongly steer forward and called on support from individuals and business partners to collaborate as food deliveries are planned for the coming weeks to areas including greater Lautoka.

A statement from the foundation said Solia Lesu by Marriott foundation stemmed off the Nurture pillar of Serve 360 that believes in making the communities where the group operate better places to live, work and visit and to support the resiliency and sustainable development of these communities, it invests in the vitality of their children and natural resources, as well as deliver aid and support, especially in times of need.
